

April 1st, 2011

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Rogers,

I thought it would be best to let you know about Jonah's behavior this past week in my classroom. Let's just say that he has been anything but normal.

Here are just a few of the incidents that have occurred over the past five days:

- He tied my shoelaces to my desk, which caused me to fall on my face when I attempted to walk to the front of the classroom.
- He put hot sauce in my coffee. He actually did this twice.
- During a fraction lesson, he yelled out, "I don't know the answer, but I know that you are half nuts!"
- At lunch on Monday, he started a food fight because he didn't like that Mrs. Manner was serving buffalo on her "buffalo" wing pizza.
- On Thursday, he kept calling me "Mr. Cheese Ball" instead of Mr. Pavlus.

Jonah and I have discussed his behavior, and he said he was sorry (though he had a huge smile on his face when he said it). We have discussed what his punishment should be, and we came up with the following:

- Jonah will hand wash and polish my truck.
- He will bring me a lunch each day next week (I prefer low-carb meals) and an afternoon snack. For the afternoon snack, I would prefer any of the delicious products that are made by the fine people at the Reese's Peanut Butter Cups Corporation.
- When Jonah speaks my name, he will have to address me as, "Mr. Pavlus, the coolest guy I know."

If you think Jonah needs more punishment at home, you have my blessings.

Thank you for your time regarding this very serious matter.

Sincerely,

Mr. Ron Pavlus

The Coolest Guy Jonah Knows